NNHRC announces appreciation of Navajo peoples participation in filing complaints about predatory auto sales tactics

SAINT MICHAELS, Navajo Nation—The Navajo Nation Human Rights Commission extends their appreciation to Navajo people who have helped the office staff of the Commission to address predatory auto sales tactics by filing a complaint.

The Commission began addressing predatory auto sales tactics on December 7, 2012 at the Dilkon Chapter Public Hearing, followed by public hearings in Kayenta and Crownpoint and later a community visit to Kaibeto Chapter and Round Rock Chapter.

“We’d like to thank the Navajo people who came to the public hearings and filed a complaint with the office detailing their experience with predatory auto sales tactics,” said Leonard Gorman for NNHRC. “We’ve achieved some results in form of protocols and have more areas to develop with dealerships based on our findings. There’s more to come including the release of the NNHRC report.”

For further complaints about predatory auto sales, NNHRC will forward complaints to respective state attorney general offices. In the meantime, NNHRC will continue to provide useful information to Navajo people through radio broadcasts, social networking outlets like Facebook until further notice.
